Italy (Gruber): Built f rom, f nap; has f tun, a ven, a mar.
Russia (Hayward): Built f sev, a mos; has f rum, a ukr, ~~a/a/a/~~ a stp, f swe
Turkey (Ham): Built f smy; has a bul, a con, f bla.

Orders for Spring 1902 are due Wed., Mar. 28; mail 4:00 PM; phone 7:00 PM.

Moscow: A general warning to the British dogs; the recently formed German-Russian bond will brook no further attempts at political and military treachery. In addition, England's weak collaborator in the form of France is encouraged to relinquish all British ties.

London Times: At a press conference earlier this week, King Richard IV announced that a powerful new weapon has been rallied to the British cause. He Said this weapon has been given the name The French Army. The French Army is vastly superior to that ancient thing called The Italian Army. The French Army is expected to defeat the Italians and to also destroy the German with the help of that other amazing weapon, The British Fleet.

London Illustrated News (Winter 1901): ((It's a quarterly.)) Prime Minister Ernest announced today that because the usual Hayward tactics have become evident, Czar Hayward the Crazy may expect no mercy. Worse yet, he will not be getting our delicious British tea.

Czar Hayward is apparently a peaceful trustworthy idiot. However, you can't tell a book by its cover.

Moose Factory: One out of three correct isn't too bad!
